HOW THE BROOKLYN RING DID IT.

An Inside View of the Operations on Election Day.—The Story of a Republican Clerk.—A Morrid State of Affairs.—The Democratic Inspectors Doing all the Voting and all the Counting.—A Fine Field for a Vigilance Committee.

From the Meriden Republican.

The son of one of our wealthiest and most respected citizens, who officiated as one of the poll clerks in Brooklyn, N. Y., at the late election, writes home to his father in this city as follows, giving a complete expose, if other evidence than we have had were needed, of the villainous manner in which the Democrats won the victory in that State.

NEW YORK, Nov 4, 1869.

DEAR FATHER Thinking perhaps you might be interested in knowing something how voting is conducted in New York, I will give you a description of my experience as poll clerk on Tuesday, Nov. 2. I acted in the ——th district of the ——th ward, Brooklyn—the roughest ward in the city, but the best district in the ward The polls opened at 6 30 a m, at which time there was a crowd of Irishmen on hand, all ready to commence early. I may as well say here (in order that you may understand better why some things were allowed which took place during the day) that there were four canvassers, of whom two should have been Republicans; two inspectors, of whom one should have been a Republican; and two poll clerks, of whom one was a Republican, and that was myself, and I was the only Republican in the crowd

My duties were to write down the name of each man as he voted, his residence, and what tickets he voted—there being nine tickets in all The first thing they did was to send for a bottle of whisky and short y after they sent for another They had two bottles of whisky and a pitcher of lager there all day, and as fast as one got empty they would send out and have it filled up again At first things went very well, but it was not long before they commenced their games Almost every man that voted would have from three to five votes A short dialogue, something after this manner, generally ensued before they commenced voting

"See here, you've only got three tickets, don't you want to vote the whole nine?"

"No, I don't care for the rest"

"Yes you do, you'd better vote the whole thing"

"Well, I don't care, but I hav'n't got the tickets here; somebody give me some tickets"

"Oh never mind, here are some tickets"

A lot of Democratic tickets had been placed just behind the ballot boxes, and the managers of the voting would take up one for each box, stuff them in, and call off to the voter's name, which I was bound to put down And so it went on all day—one continuous game of stuffing The place was jammed all day with a drunken set of Irish Democrats. I didn't see a Republican until about 8 o clock p m. I had my breakfast at 5 30 a m and my dinner at 3 p m, and didn't get anything more to eat until 5 30 p the next day.

The polls closed at 5 56 p. m, and then commenced the fun After the State ticket had been counted they came pretty near having a fight I was busy making out papers and getting ready to send in my returns to headquarters, so did not keep tally with the other poll clerk He handed me his paper to make out my returns from, and on looking over it I found that according to his figures there had been over a thousand votes recorded when in reality there were only 278 rightfully polled I spoke about it, and you should have seen him fly He wanted to know what business it was of mine, and called me everything but a good fellow

About this time some one in the crowd took the matter up, and they had it hot and heavy, but the Republican stood no show, and did a very wise thing under the circumstances, and that was to clear out, had he not done so they would have broken his head for him I refused to make any return from his paper, and so the matter stood until we got through with the other eight tickets, when they went to work and cooked up a paper to suit themselves, and I didn't dare do anything else but send in the return as they give it to me, for I had already had a row on almost every ticket

After the State ticket we took the others in Order I made up my mind that I would keep tally of the votes as they were called off myself, which made lively work for me, as I had to make out complete returns of every ticket, and send a policeman up to headquarters with it, as soon as completed We didn't agree in a single thing, the other poll clerk would have the biggest majorities for the Democrats. The Assembly ticket is a fair sample of the way things went Adding the Democrat and Republican tickets together he had 519 votes, and you remember there were only 278 votes polled

Of course I refused his figures, and sent in a return of my own, which I believe to be as near correct as it was possible to get them Upon my refusing his figures he would get mad, and swear like a trooper The air was so impregnated with tobacco smoke that it is a wonder we were not dead drunk from merely breathing the air Over every ticket we had a row, which would end in my sending in my own figures Of course the crowd backed the other fellow up, and I expected every minute they would either break my head or pitch me out of the building

There were three policemen there all the time besides the one I had to take in my returns One policeman sat down on one side of me, another on the other side, and the other kept the crowd away from me They told me to do so I was doing and stick to my rights and they would see me through. We got through about twelve o'clock at night with the counting, at which time the two inspectors were laid out drunk on the floor The canvassers were so drunk they could not make out their books, of which there were three. I had to make out all three, which took me until 2 30 a. m, writing as hard as I could. I preserved a copy of all my returns, and I made the books agree with them

After I got through with these books the canvassers managed to sign their names to them which completed my day's work. We were compelled to carry the inspectors out, as they were so drunk they could not walk I helped one of the canvassers home myself. I never passed through such a scene before in my life I had forgotten to refer to one important fact, that on the ticket for assessment and taxation there were 151 against and one for it. I thought you would like to have an impartial statement of how voting is conducted in this city, and have hurriedly tried to acquaint you with the facts.

I remain your affectionate son, ALFRED

Whirling and Howling Dervishes in Constantinople

Cor. N. Y Tribune.

In my wanderings among the mosques of this city of Turks, I have witnessed, with all the amazed bewilderment which such a scene gives to the mind of a stranger, the spectacle of the dancing dervishes. Let me describe it to you The centre of the mosque is railed in, and the floor remarkably smooth After prostrating themselves many times, while one sings or chants, they all, clothed in a brown garment, advance toward the singer, bend the upper half of the body until it is horizontal, then kneel, and finally place their foreheads on the ground Then they rise, facing the altar; and after alternations of singings and prostrations, music is commenced on a kind of flageolet, the outer brown garment is thrown aside, and the dervishes stand ready, in short white trowsers and white skirt, fastened at the waist, extending to the knee, to commence, with bare feet on the floor, whirling at the given signal The first movement is to turn the right foot over the left, toes inward as if clubbed, raising at the same time the left heel, having previously given an impetus to the left when raising the right foot. This is the entire motion, continued successively about every two turns they make while revolving slowly, and also advancing successively in their orbit toward the altar. Afterward, as their zeal increases, perhaps one such clubfoot movement implies three or four times round. They consider this as symbolizing eternity and the vicissitudes of life, while the right hand extended palm up, implores gifts from Heaven, which the left hand, turned downward, is supposed to be distributing to fellow mortals, retaining few of the temporal gifts for themselves The whole scene is solemn; and when they stop whirling, at a signal, and march round, bowing to their leader, without turning their back on him, they are often graceful, and always meek and earnest.

Of the howling dervishes. I had no previous adequate conception, and it is difficult to do the scene anything like justice, although, after relieving ourselves of our boots, we were led to a gallery and comfortably seated, Turk fashion, on sheep skins, where we had a full opportunity to hear and see. Each worshiper, after advancing to make a salutation before the altar as he came in, seated himself in oriental fashion, on sheep skins in a semi-circle before their chief Priest. They came in all sorts of dresses, several being soldiers, and if late at once fell into the motions and the chant of the others. The women here, as well as at the other dervish worship seemed to occupy a gallery inclosed with lattice work, somewhat reminding one of the gallery for ladies in the British Parliament. The peculiar chants and howls, I will endeavor to represent in English orthography, without pretending to say what it meant, except when the word Allah or Bismillah occurred. It was somewhat thus. While seated on the floor, and bending the body diagonally forward, first to the right and then to the left, and having the head play as if hung on wires, in unison with the vociferations, they commenced, moderately at first, afterward more energetically, and at last furiously, alternately chanting, shouting, and howling through the gamut, sometimes distonically, words like "wurra leeze, burlmeck," at least fifty times. Then they would hold up their hands on each side of the face and bring them down, striking head and breast. Then rising then bodies to the knee and striking their foreheads on the ground, they would assume the squatting position usually, and, swaying of the body, give a series of energetic sounds like "bump," while one kept up a prolonged howl, like the drone of the bagpipes through the variations of the chant proper. Suddenly, at a signal, the chorus ceased, and a weak nasal solo gave an obligato, then the chorus struck in pianissimo, with every few seconds the favorite staccato grunt, which sounded somewhat like a short bark. This chorus seemed to repeat a thousand times the words, "Dr-ha darlp d'Allah" When this had continued nearly an hour, they then rose, and ranging themselves against the wall (after some receiving caps and white scarfs) and placing the feet apart so as to brace themselves, and swaying the body as before, they continued in all perhaps three-quarters of an hour more But there were sundry variations in the grunts, and these were now accompanied by all turning their heads to the right and backing at their right hand neighbors, then all to the left, and so on until apparently some were quite exhausted. Then one, who seemed to be a kind of choir leader, and also a soldier, would stamp his foot to give new life to the choir Then the "bump" and stamp of feet, and crack of hands replaces, for a time, the voices, except the obligato howl, while the bobbing of the head works with breakneck rapidity. Now the obligato gives renewed stamps with right foot, and their flagging spirits are again urged to a tremendous series of vociferous staccato grunts, until it seems as if some members of the choir must drop Meantime a whirling dervish, apparently excited by the scene, stands in the centre and performs his gyrations with white skirt flying out to a circle, exceeding hoop skirt dimensions. Even some children of eight or ten, in their enthusiasm, stand up and try to imitate the movements and sounds of the howling chorus During part of this scene the High Priest, or, as some say he is called, the Schah, was blessing infants by rubbing his foot over their backs as they lay on the ground When the older ones came, and grown men, he stood with his right foot on their loins and rubbed his left over their back, and sometimes afterward over their breasts They then rose, kissed his hand, and be blessed them When sick, he blessed a cup of some liquid and gave them to drink If their eyes were inflamed he placed his hands on their temples and rubbed the thumbs repeatedly over the eye lids. From even these singular proceedings under our gallery my attention was now irresistibly drawn by the increased energy of the howling chorus A the risk of being expelled from their mosque, I took down the proceedings rapidly, the Chorus men turn to right and left, with continued grunt and prolonged howl Now, side by side, sustaining each other from failing when exhausted, they, orchestra-like, bring on the grand crash toward the last With an asthmatic wheeze, a diminuendo and then crescendo howl, varied by the staccato grunt, almost in fugue pursuit of each other, they bob like supple-jacks, perspiring at every pore, until, with a chaos of twangs and shrieks, and grunts, and a last fearful howl a stamp of the foot brings death like silence, and the exhausted band glide, like ghosts, through a rawhide door, and the service is closed As they seem earnest and devout, this apparently ludicrous scene does not arouse laughter in most persons, but rather sobriety

Another Monster Hotel

From the N Y Evening Mail

Large hotels, buildings which would have been wonders of architecture with us fifty years ago are rising here and there upon these twenty square miles or so of sand and rock, known on the maps as Manhattan Island, at the rate of one per month or there abouts. If it were possible to keep the record of these, giving to our readers in details of the mushroom growths, they would scarcely find it interesting reading, so like are these great fungi to each other But it does occasionally happen that a new member of this family pops up its head so high or assumes such astounding portliness that we cannot well avoid saying, "Bless us, did you ever?" when we noted its huge proportions, and, as a matter of course, are called upon for a translation of our admiration. We have only recovered our breath from looking up at the Grand Hotel on Thirty first street and Broadway, from our admiration of the courage of the brave fellows who had on the last row of brick on the upper story, and from our tender sympathies for the unfortunates who keep among the stars, yet daily descend to Manhattan mud for breakfast, when we are plunged into the sea of wonder once again by the news that there is another monster caravansary going up, to which all its older relations are in comparison but little fellows. The work on the great building is already begun, and the site is that of the old Lefarge House, which, it will be remembered, suffered so seriously by the fire which consumed the Winter Garden Theatre in the Spring of 1867, that it was not reopened. At the late auctioneer of the affairs of the Lefarge estate the hotel was sold to one of the wealthiest capitalists, Mr E S Higgins, for one million dollars Mr. Higgins, who is reputed to have a few millions to spare, and to know how to keep a hotel," made this purchase with a view of rising in this great hotel centre a house which should have no equal on this continent, if any in Europe, either in size or be magnificence of its appointments To this end some hundred men or so are now at work, unseen by Broadway promenaders, at the rear excavation of the great structure The Broadway front will be of marble, and rise to the height of eight stories, surmounted by three towers, thus taking place among the most taking architectural effects of the city. The building is to contain over six hundred apartments, and three hundred of these will be parlors en suite These, it is claimed, will accommodate fully twelve hundred guests, a third more than any of our great hotels and the largest ever built on the continent, not even excepting the Lindell Hotel at St. Louis, which, it will be remembered, was burned some three years ago The Lindell had only five hundred rooms.

It is said that this great building, to be named the Southern Hotel, will cost over a million and a half of dollars—for the handsome shell alone—and that it will take about a like sum to put it in readiness for guests. Its appointments will, of course, be in keeping with its exterior grandeur Our sympathy for the future tenants of the upper stories are soothed by the information that there will be three elevators in perpetual motion, at times making the round trip of the sixteen stories, eight going up and eight coming down, in sixty seconds.—If this elevator business goes on progressing, there is no good reason why those unhappy far-up town people need worry themselves any longer, when in a few years we can have our pleasant, airy suite of rooms on a fifty seventh story or so in a down town hotel, and be forever relieved from the horrors of street cars, street beetle, street odors, and street everything abominable. Oh, happy future! when we shall be elevated every night before going to our beds, and (rest on down pillows among the stars

Lecture—Fred Douglass

Geneva Hardware—Haskins & Weed

FREDERICK DOUGLASS the famous colored orator, is to lecture in Corinthian Hall, Thanksgiving night

FOUND—A gold earring, which the owner can recover by calling at this office

A NEW HARDWARE STORE has just been opened at Pleasantville, or, as some call it "Red Hot," by Messrs O B Haskins and William Weed Both of these gentlemen are favorably known in this vicinity, and their experience not only as merchants but as practical oil operators will give them a great advantage in adapting their trade to the varied wants of the oil miner It is needless to state that their store will contain everything that such establishments in the heart of the oil regions are stocked with Operators in their immediate vicinity as well as those at Shamburg, Upper Cherry Run and Pleasantville, will find it to their interest to call on Haskins & Weed and examine their stock.

Petroleum Items

—A new well was struck on the Tobey farm, between Lower Cherry run and the Allegheny river a few days ago It is owned by Messrs. Phillips, Mansfield, Mawhinney, and others

—The well on the Evans Bros., on the Watson Scott Oil Company's tract, Upper Cherry run, is reported to be producing from 150 to 200 barrels daily

The old Harmonial well No 9, on the Armstrong farm, Pleasantville, which was drilled into the sixth sand to a depth of about a year ago, and which produced a small quantity of green oil for some time, was recently cleaned deeper and torpedoed It is now yielding ten barrels of green oil daily The success which has attended the late operations on this well proves conclusively that a green oil belt underlies the Pleasantville black oil producing track. This well is located about one hundred rods to the east of well on the Indian contract, and is of much importance, as it indicates the course taken by the green oil

Messrs Hukill, Mitchell and Davis struck a new twenty five barrel well on the Shaw farm near Lower Cherry run, last week

—At Parker's Landing the production is constantly increasing, and new strikes are being made at the rate of two or three per week About a week ago a new fifty barrel well was struck on the upper island by Messrs Stanton & Allen A few days previous the Enterprise well No 2 was struck This well commenced to produce at the rate of twenty five barrels daily, but the yield has since increased, and now is about sixty barrels per day

—On Saturday last two new wells were struck on Fisher Brothers farm, formerly the Hurst farm One of them is producing two barrels and the other fifteen barrels daily

That Mysterious Murder

SHAMBURG Nov 12, 1869

Editors Morning Herald

GENTLEMEN I would beg leave to state for your benefit, and for the benefit of those persons who believe the "shooting affair near Tionesta to be a hoax" that the account given by me is literally correct, as the shooting really did take place, and if Capt West was trying to play off sharp it was without my knowledge or consent Moreover, the person who wrote the article in your paper of to day was not posted in regard to West's affairs, as all of his debts in the oil regions would not amount to three hundred dollars You say that "we think that the account which Mr Godkin gave does not wear the appearance of probability" Well, I am thankful that "we" are not infallible and that there are as wise heads in the oil regions as those which "we" possess And, sirs, I believe I can say, without fear of contradiction, that no creditor of Capt West is searching for him

Now, if you will be kind enough to publish the names of the persons writing about this melancholy occurrence, you will greatly oblige your humble servant, J A GODKIN

REMARKS—It is quite evident that Mr Godkin does not like to have his story doubted, and we are glad to see that, whether improbable or not, he sticks to it. We are also glad to learn that Captain West does not owe more than three hundred dollars (this announcement will give general satisfaction), and further, that none of his creditors are searching for him, as they would be very likely to find him, and in that event it is barely possible that his story and Mr Godkin's might not agree Besides, we would not under any circumstance wish so uncomfortable a fellow as a creditor searching for any one, much less for one who had been shot at, as Mr Godkin says Captain West was However, since we have Mr Godkin's word that the affair took place as narrated by him, we are bound to believe that it did, but we are sorry that he has some doubt as to whether Captain West intended to play sharp or not, as he implies, in saying "if Captain West was trying to play off sharp, it was without my knowledge or consent"

DR. VARIAN has returned to Titusville, and is prepared to attend to all professional calls at his residence, corner of Walnut and Washington streets.

Southern Education.

The eighth semi-annual report of J. W Alvord, General Superintendent of Schools among refugees and freedmen, for the six months ending July, 1869 just issued, contains a great deal of matter of interest to the friends of education everywhere. The educational returns furnish evidence of decided progress. The report sets forth that difficulties indeed still continue, arising from prejudice, indifference and want of means, and more especially, during the last year, from political disturbances throughout the whole country, and also from agitation of various unsettled Southern questions on the subject of Reconstruction. But these difficulties have been in the main surmounted. Organized opposition appears to have mainly ceased, and favor toward schools for all is in most of the States publicly professed. The sentiments of the former masters as to education are by no means elevated to the standard of the public school system at the North General taxation for this purpose is questioned Paying for educating other people's children for the public welfare is not understood Quite inferior schools are thought sufficient for the colored race, but, with universal suffrage conceded, surely the freedman's vote should be intelligent As the colored man is to become a part of society, he must have substantially its privileges. Taxation for schools implies the unquestioned right to be in schools An effort has been made to get good and enough high and training schools for the preparation of teachers This effort has been successful Thirty nine such schools, having 3 377 pupils, with many normal classes in those of lower grades, are reported The following is a summary of the statistics contained in the report Day and night schools, 2 118, Sabbath schools, 1 196, total, 3 314 Teachers in day and night schools 3 455, teachers in Sabbath schools, 5 454, total, 7 900 Pupils in day and night schools, 114 522, pupils in Sabbath schools, 80,731, total, 194 253 Of these pupils 192 226 are reported as having been slaves before the war Of the above day and night schools the freedmen sustained wholly or in part 1 581, and are the owners of 759 of the buildings in which the schools are held The Bureau furnished 771 of the buildings used for educational purposes The majority of the schools are conducted according to the most approved system Many able instructors are successfully laboring in them as is proved by the number of advanced schools, 312 of which are reported as graded These rival many institutions of the same class in the North of much longer standing Besides these there are (within the knowledge of the Superintendent, but not regularly reported) day and night schools, 794 Sabbath schools, 316, total, 1 101 Teachers in day and night schools 902, teachers in Sabbath schools, 692, total, 1 591 Pupils in day and night schools, 34 722 pupils in Sabbath schools 17 578 total, 52,300 Adding all these to the regularly reported schools we have an aggregate of schools of all kinds, 4 424, total teachers of all kinds, 9 503, total pupils of all kinds, 256 955 This is the largest result yet reached and in comparison with the corresponding six months of last year, shows a large increase The report reviews the condition of freedmen's schools in the several Southern States, and says they are most in a flourishing and satisfactory condition, the number of teachers and scholars having largely increased especially in North Carolina and Kentucky

Chinamen Not Coming.

After all the talk in the newspapers in California about the dangers and undoubted prospect of an overwhelming immigration of Chinamen to this country, it would seem that we need not greatly trouble ourselves about it, at least for the present It is almost ludicrous Koopmanschap who is here to day and anywhere to morrow I now in California, and declares that there are certainly three thousand Chinamen in that State who are wholly unemployed Five hundred of them were about to leave (November 3) for the Southern States, to work on the Memphis and El Paso Railroad The remainder are ready to take such work as they can get, though many of them who have saved money are going back to China in companies of fifty or more to plant rice during the ensuing season in that country There is actually no danger, as was feared in September, of a sudden Chinese influx to fill California, to engage in the chapparal cutting of San Francisco, or to supplant freedmen labor at the South So far from it, Koopmanschap's scheme is likely to prove a comparative failure, it is doubtful if Chinese labor enough to build the needed railways in California and the South can be procured next year, and it is now asserted by good authority in San Francisco that no movement or attempt of Chinese possible in this country, till the whole social and religious organization of the Chinese Empire changes This will not happen next week, nor next summer, and until it do so come what may we need no panic about Chinese competition with white or black labor in this country

THE NOVEMBER METEORS—About this time look out for meteoric showers, say the astronomers Saturday last was the day especially set apart for the great display of the season, for then the earth passed through the meteoric orbit, and hence the annual visitation of celestial fireworks But we do not learn that anything extraordinary was witnessed on that occasion, or indeed that anybody here about sat up from midnight till dawn to test the accuracy of the prediction Almost every fine evening at this season is marked with a few specimen meteors Remarkable showers of "shooting stars" or meteors have been observed many times in the world's history, and in many places In November, A D, 472 as we read in astronomical works, such a phenomenon appeared at Constantinople, when the sky appeared to be on fire with meteors A similar display occurred on the morning of November 13, 1799 and was witnessed in both North and South America, as well as in Europe Humboldt, who was at Cumana in Venezuela, in describing the scene, says—"There was not a space in the firmament, equal in extent to three diameters of the moon, which was not filled every instant with falling stars" In November, 1819, a similar shower was observed in Canada. But by far the grandest exhibition of the kind of which we have any record occurred November 12 1833 and was witnessed by multitudes in the United States In November, two years ago, a predicted shower was observed in England, and, being reported by cable in the N Y Herald of next morning, was declared a hoax by a New Haven professor, who afterwards was made to feel quite small when the mails verified the telegraphic account

Computing Interest.

The Chicago Journal gives a new rule for computing interest, and says it is so simple and so true that every banker, broker, merchant or clerk should post it up for reference By no other arithmetical process can the desired information be obtained by so few figures

Six per cent—Multiply any given number of dollars by the number of days of interest desired, separate the right hand figure and divide by six the result is the true interest on such sum for such number of days at six per cent

Eight per cent—Multiply any given amount by the number of days upon which it is desired to ascertain the interest, and divide by forty five, and the result will be the interest of such sum for the time required, at eight per cent.

Ten per cent—Multiply the same as above and divide by thirty-six and the result will show the rate of interest at ten per cent.

American Credit Abroad.

A Tribune correspondent writing under date of October 19th, from Frankfort-on Main, says that European financiers think that our national debt can be funded at five per cent, but not under that amount. The many Continental railway loans in the foreign market, and the six and seven per cent gold bonds offered there by American railroads now building have a tendency to keep up high rates of money.

One great drawback to the funding our debt at a lower rate of interest, is the continuous threat of repudiation or payment in currency, by the Democratic party, Gen Butler, and others Our politics are not well understood, and all such things have a tendency to injure our credit Several foreign capitalists hold Florida and Mississippi bonds, and some County bonds of Western States, which do not pay, and sometimes fear a similar result—not absolute repudiation, but payment in Greenbacks or taxation of the bonds Even a resolution off red in Congress to this effect is calculated to injure our credit, more particularly now, as our railroads are anxious to sell their bonds here

Re-Assessment of the Income Tax.

Commissioner Delano is determined that the income tax shall be collected at all hazards, and being satisfied that great frauds have been practiced, he has ordered re assessments to be made This is all right. If the law is wrong in principle, if the tax is excessive, let it be repealed or modified But while it stands on the statute book however obnoxious or oppressive, let it be enforced, without fear or favor. The present yield of the income tax is only between thirty-five or forty millions, and it is believed that nearly double that sum would be realized were returns rendered honestly and without evasion or concealment. The Pittsburgh Dispatch relates the following instances of the tricks resorted to, to escape the payment of the income tax

One merchant perhaps, finds at the end of the year that his entire profits are represented in a book account, or perhaps receivables to the amount of $50 000 Nothing can be received with himself be considered as income that has not actually been received As he argues these accounts may be, although perfectly good, have not been collected, and therefore he has no income This satisfies his conscience and evades the tax not a few forthwith makes his return Another well to do merchant who seems to be doing a prosperous business and receives as if he, at least, honors himself in the payment of a liberal income, appears in the revenue returns as living without any income whatever The Government loses the $2 500, but the merchant does not lose the accounts due him, which he proceeds to collect and place to a credit of his bank account, apparently not supposing that any portion of that bank account will find its way into Government coffers Another merchant who has made his accounts into his business statements are made and a sum set apart as a guarantee against losses which may arise therefrom An instance of this kind is unearthed in New York In looking and auditing accounts in the fall of 1865 a firm invested $300 000 in Government bonds at 109 By January 1867, the bonds had risen to 115 giving the firm a profit on a large profit But when they came to make their income returns, they thought it good not to set apart from their profits the sum of $3 000 to guarantee them against the loss which might result from a possible depreciation of the bonds It is needless to add that the $3 000 was deducted from the amount returned as income, and thus the firm was avoid and the Government defrauded of $1 500 in taxes In such tricks in book keeping as these that a thorough revision of the assessments is meant to cure, and will cure

Refined Oil to be Bought and Sold by Weight—Exporters' Circular

The subject of buying and selling Refined oil by weight, I acknowledge generally agitated, and this time with so much energy that it looks as if the trade would arrive at a proper understanding of the matter before the agitation ceases The present system of buying and selling is subject to so many abuses that it will indeed be strange if it be adhered to after the abuses have been verbated The movement to change the system has not met with any opposition of consequence in the East the receivers, refiners, dealers and exporters are unanimously in favor of the proposed change, and the refiners and dealers of Pittsburgh have expressed similar views

The leading exporters, dealers and receivers of New York and Philadelphia have issued the following circular, dated New York, October 22d, 1869

We, the undersigned shippers and exporters of Petroleum have become satisfied, that the present system of gauging petroleum barrels will be satisfactory to the trade of Europe in consequence of some frauds and other causes, on account of short gauges, and these complaints have been caused

1 By careless and inaccurate gauging,

2 By the peculiar construction of many barrels,

3 By the enlarged size of the barrels, and by other causes well known to the trade

We have therefore combined and pledged ourselves that from the first day of January next, we shall buy only by actual weight and tare, and we keep entirely aside the dealers and refiners of New York Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Cleveland, and other points to meet us in our demands, which are based upon justice and equity And we further agree each them to instruct with us the new system from the first day of January next.

Though well aware that the contemplated change involves many difficulties, there as well as abroad, yet we, for our part, are willing to sacrifice for the common good, hoping to meet the same spirit with refiners We propose to commutate for the same by the better prices which under the new system will be obtainable, and also by saving the refiners many expenses which are now unavoidable. Arrangements can be perfected, by which the refiners will be materially benefited Under proper restrictions the oil can be inspected in Cleveland or Pittsburgh, and merely a small percentage of barrels need be opened here to test the quality of the oil and correct weight of tares This will save large amounts of money to the refiners, and prevent the barrels from being unnecessarily handled—a great advantage for the European purchaser

A few weeks will regulate the new system, and causing a new era in transactions in the article, sellers, as well as buyers, will wonder that this necessary and desirable change had not been introduced long ago

RESOLUTIONS OF THE BNAI ACHIM CONGREGATION—At a special meeting held by the Congregation Bnai Achim, the following resolutions were unanimously adopted

Peat versus Coal.

The increasing scarcity of timber and the high price of coal excite a general public interest in all efforts to bring peat into practical competition as a standard fuel. There are immense deposits of peat in Pennsylvania and Ohio, and the attention of capitalists is already directed to the undertaking of developing it for general consumption. In this month's Putnam's Magazine there is an excellent article on "The New Fuel," from which we take the following:

A systematic plan of manufacture is in operation at a bog recently opened near Revenna, O The peat is dug to a depth of from eight to fifteen feet with shovels and spades, the latter being a kind of spade, with a wing at the side bent at right angles with the blade, so as to form two sides of a square, and loaded into dump cars, which are drawn up an inclined plane upon iron rails by friction gearing, and the contents rapidly emptied into an immense hopper containing one hundred and fifty tons of crude peat At the bottom of the hopper is a large elevating belt running over drums upon which the peat is thrown and rapidly carried into the cond ioning and moulding machine Two men are all that are required to keep the machine full. The conditioning and moulding machine is run by steam power It receives the crude peat from the elevating belt in a wet or moist state and delivers it in a smooth homogeneous condition through two inclined discs, each three and three-quarter inches by four and three quarter inches in area from which it is delivered on drying racks, passing horizontally under the machine Each rack is twenty six by seventy two inches, constructed of light pine, holding five bins or cases of peat, which when dry will yield to each rack from thirty to sixty pounds of fuel, according to the density of the peat The racks are carried from the machine on an inclined tramway made of light iron wheels, so that the racks will almost glide from their own gravity These racks are taken from the tramway and set up like an inverted V, on the drying ground, where being exposed to the sun, and the air circulating freely around and between the bars they dry in from ten to twelve days, and are ready to be loaded into cars for shipment and use The distance between the base of the V being the same as their length, the drying ground is greatly economized An acre will hold at one five thousand of these racks, from fifteen thousand to twenty thousand being in requisite component for the machinery Sixteen men and ten boys on the rackway will make eighty tons of prepared fuel per diem—indeed here is hardly a limit to the capacity of the machinery, if labor enough is employed With forty seven men digging and clearing off the racks from the tramway, one hundred and fifty tons of dried fuel can be made per day This fuel can be delivered at a less price than the best coal, and the cost of preparing it for market is lighter than that required in coal mining. It can be afforded as low as $4 50 per ton, and even lower, within a reasonable distance from the bogs, and it is more economical than coal.

We commend the facts set forth in the above to the careful consideration of citizens of our own State, who own peat lands The high prices of coal or wood must sooner or later result in the introduction of some cheaper or more abundant fuel There are in Pennsylvania thousands of acres covered with peat varying from one to ten or twenty feet in thickness, and with a judicious expenditure of capital, and the introduction of suitable machinery, these long lands might be rendered very valuable A ready market would be found in our cities and villages, and on all our railways We hope ere long to be able to chronicle the fact that men of energy capital and enterprise are engaged in the development of this important source of wealth

New Remedy for Burns

Editors Morning Herald

I beg to enclose an extract from Appleton's Journal in the hope that its publication may be of value in this section where so many persons have been painfully burned. Perhaps some of our medical friends will inform us if any varnish will answer A discussion of the merits of this new remedy can do no harm

The attention of medical men in Paris has recently been directed to a new remedy for burns discovered accidentally by a workman A varnisher of metals hastily got his hand severely burned while at work, and not knowing what to do to ease the acute pain, thrust his hand into a pot of varnish The pain ceased, as if by enchantment, on the day following, he made numberless application of his discovery, and, in a few days the skin was found to cover the burn and the hand recovered its wonted flexibility Another person burned in his wing both and came to get their wounds dressed received the simple remedy, and went home rejoicing After the terrible gunpowder explosion at Meziat month the varnisher was summoned to the hospital to do his best for the victims of that calamity, whose lives were depended on account of the cruelty of their burns, he varnished and cured them in such a short space of time that the Government Marty was filled with astonishment at this success The news of the wonderful cure reached Paris the minister of one of the largest hospitals hastened to him, and, desirous of testing the security of the reports, intrusted him with two patients who were dangerously burned He covered them over with his varnish, leaving a spot upon one unanointed to be treated with nitrate of silver The burned parts of the hand were cured by the chemical application of the varnish In wounds so covered with varnish healing rapidly, while those treated with nitrate of silver required to all the doctor's efforts did not come up The services of the varnisher were again called in on which occasion only applied his remedy to the spots which the nitrate of silver was powerless to heal The two patients said almost instantaneously, after a short detention, left the hospital completely cured, thus once more establishing the superlative excellence of his remedy for such cases

Touching Incident

From the Eastern Pa, Free Press

We hear of an incident yesterday concerning the burning of the school building the other day, which as well illustrated the noble part of human nature that we give it publication

In one of the schools there was a young girl who is a cripple It is the custom of the teacher to allow her when the scholars are dismissed always to pass out first in order that she may escape from the confusion attendant upon the dismissal of so many children On Monday last, when the alarm of fire was sounded all the school rooms were at once emptied of their occupants While in all of them they rushed out in dismay and fright, in some cases leaving everything behind, in the one where the lame was there was perfect quietness and order All the scholars, notwithstanding the noise and the apparent danger remained quietly in their seats till their lame companion had gotten safely out, and was secure from the rush, when they with a bound cleared the room They thought of her safety before their own, neither fright nor self danger induced them to provide for themselves until they saw her secure from peril Such a display of consideration and kindness we have not heard of for many a day, and when we remember that it came from children, it behooves all the more touching and beautiful

SPIRITUALISTS in England are in dismay over the recent confessions of a Mr Faulkner, of 40 Endell street, London, a manufacturer of philosophical instruments Mr Smalley, the correspondent of the New York Tribune, writes that Mr Faulkner testifies to a large and constant sale for many years of spirit rapping magnets and batteries, made for concealment in cupboards, under tables and floors, and in large tables and boxes He sold also large quantities of prepared wire, to be connected with the magnets, and to run under the carpets and oil cloth, or under the wainscot and get heading around rooms The connection between the battery and each rap per was made by a small button, like those used in telegraphic bell ringing, or by brass headed or other nuts, under the carpet at particular places known to the spiritualists

The deception, he says, is almost perfect for the unwary, and may confound even the shrewdest observers. There are even pocket batteries and magnets which can produce raps in any part of a room The implements manufactured to order embrace also drums and bells, which may be beat or rung by the same agencies, but as these are more easy of detection, they are less frequent

The Davenport Brothers were detected not long ago in England, in deliberate deceptions; and this new testimony to frauds practiced on a credulous public will be damaging to the claims of spiritualism.

RAILROAD REFORM.—It is notorious that when railroad trains collide, car platforms are crushed to atoms, and cars telescoped together. A writer suggests that if platforms were constructed on a level and as part of the sill of the car instead of below the sill, the violence of the shock would be diminished and the resisting power twenty times as great. But we like still better the writer's recommendation that platforms should be abolished entirely, and our cars built as in Europe without platforms and with entrances at the sides. But besides the greater safety and the easier escape afforded by the European manner of construction, there are arguments of convenience in its favor. Such a system would give more personal and family privacy to railroad travel, a passenger could ticket through, the conductor's rounds of visits could be dispensed with and the vender of prize candy, figs, chestnuts, comic papers, and well thumbed photographic views, would find his occupation gone, and leave a passenger to supply his wants in this line at refreshment saloons and news stands, at convenient stations

All Sorts.

A young man and a gentleman from Boston became acquainted with and married a young lady from Hartland, Me. It has been the custom of the wife to visit her parents every summer, and while on her visit last summer was taken ill and died. The husband was in Buffalo, New York, on business, and upon receiving a letter from his wife that she was quite sick, started immediately for Hartland, but his wife had died the day before his arrival. Early the next day the physician sent in his pay. The husband, who had suddenly left home, was not prepared for such an emergency, but told the physician that he would pay his bill immediately upon his arrival in Boston. At Waterville a sheriff entered the cars and arrested him, by order of the doctor, for the small bill he had against him. Through the aid of some friends, who chanced to be near, the matter was adjusted, and the husband went on his way, but probably not with a very exalted idea of Hartland doctors.

The London Daily News, referring to Mr. Boutwell's Philadelphia speech and the rapid payment of the national debt, says that "nothing has been known like it, and Mr. Boutwell appears only too moderate in assuming that such a nation may soon be able to substitute loans bearing a low interest for its present high rated debt."

The New York Evening Post says that Mr. Bayard Taylor's promised novel, "Joseph and His Friend," has no connection with Mr. G. W. Curtis's "Potiphar Papers."

An eight year old son of a Madison county, Ill., farmer, living about three miles from St. Louis, strayed away from home seven years ago and could not be found. The father's house being on the road, he fancied that movers from the interior had stolen the boy and taken him away across the river, perhaps to a great distance from his home. A few days ago, more than seven years after the child was lost, his father accidentally discovered him, now a lad of 15 years, at an Orphan's Home in St. Louis. The strange feature of this is that the boy had never been all this time a half a dozen miles from his parent's residence, he having been taken to the Asylum by an old woman who found him in the street some time in 1862.

General Custer was lately advertised to address a Democratic meeting in Leavenworth, but in a card to the papers remarked that he was not in the business.

A new London play is called at the "Foot of the Ladder." It is by Mr. W. Travers, and is all about a wicked old uncle who tries to get rid of his brother's children in order to enjoy their property.

A young man and his intended presented themselves before the City Clerk of Davenport, Iowa, the other day, for a marriage license. It was found that the intended bridegroom was under age and had neither parents nor guardian. In order to make the proceedings regular, the lady suggested that she herself should be appointed guardian. As she was over eighteen she was eligible, was duly appointed on question, and then gave her consent that her ward should marry herself.

Kertch, on the Sea of Azof, has lately been made a first-class fortress by Russia, and the works are nearly equal to those of Sebastopol. One of the remarkable features of the fortress is the largest cistern in the world. It will hold a water supply for ten thousand men for a whole year.

Mr. Ruskin lately gave four of his books to a new library in England—"Queen of the Air," "Ethics of the Dust," "Crown of Olive," and "Unto this Last," with the remark that they are his only works which he wishes to be read in their present form.

Austin, Texas, was visited by a severe hailstorm on the 22d of October. The stones varied in size from that of a boy's marble to that of a teacup. One was found an hour after the storm ceased nine inches in circumference. Fruit trees were ruined, weak roofs broken through, and poultry, sheep and calves were injured or killed. The lunatic asylum received much injury. More than 700 panes of glass were broken, the roof, of galvanized iron, was pierced, and two or three tons of ice lodged on the roof. One hotel also lost about 400 panes of glass. Twelve hours after the storm ice might have been gathered by the carload from the low places in the fields where it had drifted.

Mr. Roebuck has advised a company of English workingmen to be gentlemen to their wives, and assured them that such an improvement would increase their happiness materially.

An immense bed of petrified fossil shells has been found near Saratov in South-eastern Russia. The interior of these shells contains beautiful crystals of sulphate of copper, from which it is proposed to extract the metal. In a scientific point of view this discovery is valuable, as many of the specimens are in such a good state of preservation that the shape of the shell-fish, their former occupants, can be easily traced

Griffin's Patent

WATER PACKER.

This is one of the most useful Patents for oil operators ever invented. It has several advantages over any other Seed Bag or Water Packer in use.

1st. It can be put down quicker and is instantly ready for use as there is no waiting for seed to swell, and by the quick action the well is kept clean.

2d. It can never fasten tubing or casing in a well so that it cannot be taken out readily.

EVERY OTHER PACKER IN USE HAS FASTENED STRINGS OF TUBING AND CASING, SO THEY CANNOT BE DRAWN FROM THE WELL.

3d. It is so constructed by means of a left hand screw thread that it can be loosened in a few minutes and removed from the well without difficulty. Even the caving in of the rock above the packer will not prevent the casing being drawn out readily. It can be taken out and put back without repairs.

4th. This is the only Water Packer in use that has a Patent on, all others being an infringement upon the rights secured by letters Patent granted by the United States to Anson D. Griffin, August 13th, 1867. The Packer is now offered to the public at the low price of Twelve Dollars each, and the money will be refunded by us or our agents to all parties buying them where they do not give entire satisfaction
